Jermyn man chosen for training program at Tobyhanna Depot

Joseph Oldakowski of Jermyn was among six employees of the Tobyhanna Army Depot who were recently selected for the depot's electronics mechanic apprentice training program. The depot's electronics mechanic apprentice program is the first in the Army. It is fully certified by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The new class is the fifth since the program started in 1979. Training started October 31 and will continue for the next four years, featuring both classroom and on-the-job training. The apprentices will undergo rotational assignments in all of the electronic shops of the depot's Directorate for Maintenance. Three new apprentices were selected from 174 applicants.

Bob Ashby renovates gas station

By MIKE PETROVSKY
In a town like Carbondale any type of construction is bound to raise the curiosity of passers-by. So construction work being done at Ashby's ARCO station, Main St. and Lincoln Ave., is no exception.

Robert Ashby recently purchased the station he had been leasing from the Atlantic Richfield Company for the past nine years and will now carry out the renovation work.

Arcos is selling its smaller service stations in the east coast because the California-based company is pooling their interests into their current project.

Arcos conducted a feasibility study and found that the location of the Robert Ashby station was ideal for an AM PM store.

However, those plans were rejected because self-service gasoline stations were prohibited in the city.

With representatives of other major oil companies, Ashby decided to make the station a full service station for his customers.

The improved station, the fact that Sunoco doesn't use their credit card, and the fact that Sunoco doesn't use their credit card, and the fact that Sunoco doesn't use their credit card.

The Greenfield Terrace Company, a local contracting firm owned by Edward Krantz, was hired to make the renovations to the station for the work being done includes laying forms and pouring concrete to serve as the base for the gasoline pumps. The new base is to be installed over the pump area.
